No Definite News Of The Supposed Naval Conflict Between Japs And Russians.

FRANCE HAS ACTED VERY QUICKLY

Admiral Rojestvensky Was Told To Leave The French Naval Quarters At Once, And He Obeyed Orders.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Saigon, April 24.—When last seen Rojestvensky's fleet was fifteen miles off the Annam coast and steaming north.

Not Confirmed
Paris, April 24.—It is reported the cannonade outside of Kanranh bay after the departure of the Russian fleet is not confirmed.

Discredits Rumor
St. Petersburg, April 24.—Owing to a strike of printers but two papers appeared this morning. The Novoye Vremya discredits the rumor that the Japanese have engaged Rojestvensky's fleet off the coast of Annam. The report that the crew of the Russian cruiser Diana interned at Saigon, had joined Rojestvensky's fleet, is denied here.

CANNONADING AT SEA.
Saigon, April 24.—Following the departure of the entire Russian fleet from Kanranh bay Saturday, heavy cannonading was heard at sea. It is supposed Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron was engaged with some of the Japanese warships.

It is believed here that the Russian commander encountered one or more of Togo's scouts and that the preliminary round in the great sea fight which is impending was the result. The report that Admiral Togo will assemble his fleet south of the island of Formosa on April 26 is interpreted to mean that the decisive action will be in that vicinity and that it cannot be postponed long.

Rojestvensky Is Ill.
A resident who has been trading with the Russian fleet says there were twenty warships and thirty-six transports in Kanranh bay. It is expected the fleet will leave the Annam coast on April 27. Admiral Nebogatoff's squadron joining it before it departs.

The Russian transports—Kiel, Jupiter, Kniak, Gortschakoff and Kital—are still at Saigon.

Vice Admiral Rojestvensky is suffering from dysentery, but otherwise the officers and men of the fleet left here in the best of health. No Russian officer or sailor landed in Kanranh bay, as they had expected Nebogatoff's detachment of the squadron to arrive at any moment.

The Russian admiral, according to his departure, called on Admiral Jonquieres. The meeting of the admirals was most cordial.

The natives were highly pleased with the great rise in the price of provisions owing to the Russians' visit.

UNJUST TO RUSSIA.

Paris, April 24.—Some of the newspapers of Paris, commenting upon the expulsion of the Russian second Pacific squadron from French territory waters in Indo China, hold that France, in seeking to render exact justice to Japan, has been unjust to Russia.

The Echo de Paris, which is strongly pro-Russian, says "France's insistence upon Rojestvensky's leaving Kanranh bay will have the effect of making him an easy prey to Togo, as the Russian ships, being driven from all points without being able to take on coal, must put to sea with half-filled bunkers, being thus crippled at the moment of meeting the enemy. "And this is neutrality!" scornfully observes the Echo de Paris.

Coal to Next Port.

The same paper quotes the French regulations authorizing belligerents to take on sufficient coal to reach the next port, and maintains that the "next port" is Vladivostok. Therefore, it asserts, France has not given her ally's squadron the benefit of French neutrality laws.

The Temps criticizes the Saigon report that Russian merchant vessels have been forbidden to take on the necessary coal to enable them to reach the nearest Russian port. The paper maintains that the ships have the right to take on sufficient coal to last them to Vladivostok, which is the nearest Russian port. The Temps adds:

"Hurts European Nations.
"Insular powers having many coaling stations have an interest in making neutrality rules extremely strict in order to prevent their adversaries from procuring coal through neutrals, while they enjoy full supplies from their own coaling stations. On the contrary, continental powers—France, Russia, and Germany—having comparatively few coaling stations, would be easily throttled in a conflict with an insular power having many coaling stations in case this rigid rule of neutrality becomes accepted by precedent."

FEDERAL JOBS ARE TO BE MADE VACANT IN CHICAGO

Affairs Of The Indian Warehouse at The Windy City, To Be Probed By Government.

Washington, April 24.—A shake-up in the Indian warehouse at Chicago is at hand, and wholesale dismissals are promised in the near future. The heads of some of the officials will go into the basket for overloading the government pay rolls, and the employees whose services are not needed will be dismissed. For some time a quiet investigation has been in progress, and it was found by Special Indian Agent Nesler that there were a number of men on the pay roll whose services were not required at all. It is intimated that some of these appointments were made at the instigation of politicians.

Custom Is General.
The same condition of affairs is believed to exist in St. Louis and other points, and an investigation will be made. Some months ago complaint was made to the Secretary of the Interior that gross financial irregularities existed in the Indian warehouse at New York, and that men had been appointed to office who performed no service and who did not appear at the warehouse except to draw their pay. One of these men was employed as a bartender.

Pay Rolls Are Overloaded.
The investigation not only developed that there were twice as many employees in the New York branch of the service as were needed, but that Financial Clerk Wilson was short in accounts, and that he had withheld for three months the pay of some of his political henchmen who had been appointed to office. Wilson and seven of his appointees have been dismissed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Waste Public Funds.

These "discoveries" caused Secretary Hitchcock to turn his attention to Chicago. It was found that similar conditions existed at Chicago so far as concerned the overloading of the pay roll, but it was not charged that anyone has been guilty of financial irregularities, except with regard to the waste of public funds in paying useless employees. Further inquiry will be made at Chicago before the secretary orders any dismissals, and it has not yet been decided how many employees are slated for decapitation.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON'S LIFE IS FINISHED

Great American Actor Dies at His Home in Palm Beach, Fla., Surrounded by Loved Ones.

West Palm Beach, Fla., April 24.—Joseph Jefferson, after being unconscious all day, died at 6:15 Sunday night. The end was expected, as the patient had been sinking for several days. His wife and two sons, Charles B. and Frank Jefferson, Mrs. Nellie Symons, his nurse, Miss Mabel Bingham, Dr. R. B. Potter, and his faithful old servant, Carl Kottler, were at the bedside when he died. His daughter, Josephine, and two of his sons, Thomas and Joseph, were in New York.

While no arrangements have been made for the funeral, it has been decided that the body will leave Palm Beach on a special train for the Jefferson home at Buzzards Bay, Mass. All of the family who are here will accompany the remains.

Mr. Jefferson about four weeks ago visited Grover Cleveland at Hobe sound, where he caught cold, accompanied by acute indigestion, and upon his return to Palm Beach, was forced to take to his bed. He was up after a few days, but April 13 he was seized with a relapse.

Several times during his illness the patient rallied, and it was thought that he might recover. It was seen on Friday night, however, that the end was near, and the sufferer gradually sank until death came.

Mr. Jefferson had not been in the best of health for several months, and came to his home here early in the winter, with the hope of regaining his strength. This he was doing until his trip to Hobe sound.

PATTERSON TRIAL BEGINS IN NEW YORK

Actress is Again on Trial for the Murder of Caesar Young, a Year Ago.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]

New York, April 24.—Prosecutor Band made the opening argument in the Patterson case this morning. The actress sat beside her attorney, Mr. Unger, and listened to the address very attentively. Her father took a seat near the jury box, where he could see his daughter's face. Miss Patterson was dressed in black and wore a new Easter hat, a veil partly concealing her features.

Attorney Band said he would show the murder of Young was planned the day before the shooting and this would be proved by circumstances and facts which preclude any possibility of innocence.

MILWAUKEE BANK IS AMPLY PROTECTED

Frank Bigelow, President of First National Bank, Is Removed by Directors.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]

Milwaukee, April 24.—Frank G. Bigelow, president of the First National bank of Milwaukee, one of the largest financial institutions in the west, and ex-president of the National Bankers' association, was removed this morning by the directors as president and director. The directors took immediate steps to protect the depositors and signed a personal guarantee of one million six hundred thousand dollars. This, with the surplus and undivided profits which the bank carries over and above a capital of $1,120,000, makes the position of the bank secure, it is said. Speculations, it is reported, that Bigelow told the directors of this morning, caused the trouble. Attorney Charles Quarles announced to the directors the whole affair was discovered Saturday night. William Bigelow, a brother of the president, is vice president and one of the signers of the guaranty. Mr. Bigelow was born in Washington county, New York, and is forty-seven years old. He was the son of a doctor and with the family came to Wisconsin in 1861. He entered the First National bank as a messenger in 1864 and quickly rose, step by step, to the high position he just left. He was regarded as a capable banker throughout the country. He was elected president of the American Bankers' association two years ago and everybody had implicit confidence in him.

HARD WORK FOR STATE LAW MAKERS BEGINS TODAY

Many Matters Of Importance Come Up Before The State Legislature For Their Consideration.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., April 24.—Tonight at 5 o'clock both houses of the legislature begin the last lap of the session of 1905. There will doubtless be Saturday sessions from now until adjournment, which, it is said, the leaders have tentatively determined, shall be May 18. The present week in the assembly will amount to much less in volume of work and intensity of public interest than in the senate. The first interesting event in the lower house will be the final vote on the Thayer residence option bill tomorrow morning, when the measure so strenuously opposed by the brewers of the state will come up for final passage or killing. It was advanced to third reading and engrossment last week by the close vote of 42 to 40, 18 members being absent and not voting. Consequently the result of the final vote is in doubt. This measure proposes to give a majority of the residents of any particular district of a city, not a business district, the right to make mandatory upon the common council of the city

CUT KEYSTONE STATE IN TWO

Politicians In Western Portion Of Pennsylvania Would Favor a Division.

LEGISLATIVE NEEDS DIFFERENT

Claim Now Is That Philadelphia Practically Controls The Law Making Power Without Regard To Other Interests.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 24.—Agitation is on here now for a new state. Loud calls have been sent out for the formation of the "state of Allegheny" from the twenty-three Pennsylvania counties west of the crest of the Allegheny mountains. The Pittsburg Leader, the organ of the western Pennsylvania Republican leaders, prints a three-column story advocating the move.

In part the Leader says: "There is a natural division, a trade division and a division in that community of interest that ought to exist in every state that separates Pennsylvania, and the line of it is the watershed of the Allegheny mountains. On one side the water flows into the Atlantic ocean and on the other into the Gulf of Mexico.

Says Division Is Natural.

"Whether trade always follows the water as it is said to follow the flag, it is nevertheless a fact that it does in Pennsylvania. East of the Alleghenies the business metropolis is Philadelphia and trade from that section of the state goes there. West of the mountains it converges with the streams that drain as rich a region as there is on earth at Pittsburg. Hence the great mountain range that crosses the state not only divides it topographically and geographically, but also rears itself as a wall between two different peoples, widely separated in trade and commerce and radically different in governmental and legislative needs."

Bank at Philadelphia.

That the western end of the state is disgruntled at Philadelphia and the eastern end of the state and longs to break away is shown further down in the inspired article, which reads: "Sessions of the legislature, presumably held in the interest of the whole state, are degenerating into what might be called municipal councils for the benefit of Philadelphia. Once, and perhaps to-day, Paris was France. Soon Philadelphia will be Pennsylvania. It was brought nearer that goal by the session recently closed, and the leaders

WHEAT BREAKS ON THE CHICAGO MART

Another Decided Drop in the Wheat Market This Morning Due to Gates.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]

Chicago, April 24.—There was another severe break in the wheat market this morning. May opened at 96 to 98 and dropped to 94 in the first half hour. The decline was the result of a grand rush to get out from under the May wheat deal engineered by the Gates party. The conditions are of the most panicky sort. It is figured the Gates campaign cost its originators over a million dollars.

lative history of the last twenty years shows each succeeding session has been largely devoted to the aggrandizement of the chief city at the expense of the rest of the state, particularly that part of it lying west of the Alleghenies.

Question of Morality.

"The political question is fast being eliminated from the government of Pennsylvania. It is becoming a moral question. The big social ulcer on the eastern border is eating into the vitals of the state. There lies the strength of government by boss; from there spreads the corruption of the ballot and entrenched there are the forces that are most threatening to the moral well-being of the state.

Thinking men know that a radical remedy is needed for this evil, and some say, so far as western Pennsylvania is concerned, there is no better remedy than the knife. Slice the state in two and give to that part of it that profits by the corruption the ulcer.

Outline of New State.

"On the proposed division of the state, following, as suggested, the watershed of the Allegheny mountains, the counties of Blair, Clearfield, Cameron and Potter would be divided. That would be one objection to taking the watershed as the line. But in these counties, as in the state, there is a division of interest between people east and west of the dividing ridge. The people living on the west side would probably want to cast their lot with the new state.

"The population of the new state would approximately be 2,100,000, under the 1900 census, and in that it would rank with the state of Kentucky. But 1910 would probably find it holding seventh rank among states, for the growth of it since 1900 has been greater than for the five years preceding that census, and it is reasonable to believe that for the next five years it will continue to forge ahead, because it is now practically in the beginning of its development."

the the refusal of a saloon license in that district. The brewers look upon it as a menace to their interests and are working hard against it. They are confident that even should it pass the lower house, it will fall in the senate. Its author is L. L. Thayer of Bloomer, Chippewa county, the one clergyman having a seat in the present Wisconsin legislature.

The aggressiveness with which the friends of this bill are pushing the measure has given rise to a rumor that "personal liberty" will be made an issue in the next state campaign and that there is likelihood of another "Bennett law era" in Wisconsin republican party history. The Bennett law, passed by the republicans 14 years ago, made attendance upon the public schools compulsory and operated against the religious, and parochial schools. It resulted in the defeat of the republican party and the two terms of George W. Peck as governor.

In the senate the chief interest will be in the railroad rate commission bill and the Warner state civil service measure.

DIED ON EASTER; FITTING TRIBUTE

OF A LIFE FULL OF GOODNESS
COMES TO AN END.

MISS CURTIS PASSES AWAY

Matron of the State Institute for the Blind Died Early Yesterday Morning.

At 5 o'clock Sunday morning death came to the relief of Miss Elizabeth J. Curtis, matron at the State School for Blind, and the tired spirit went out in the bright light of a glad Easter morning to the life beyond.

Death did not come as a surprise either to herself or her friends who knew her condition, for she had suffered patiently for months with a complication of diseases which baffled skill. When the end came she passed away peacefully and without a struggle, trusting implicitly in the faith which had long sustained her, and which was like an anchor to her soul. Miss Curtis was born at Sharon, Ohio, October 19, 1839. The family came to Illinois in an early day, and located in Will county. When she was eleven years old her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Lampton Curtis, died and she found a home with an aunt for a number of years, where she received a liberal education.

MISS ELIZABETH J. CURTIS

In 1858 she came to Janesville to keep house for her brother George, who was engaged in the drug business on the corner now occupied by Mr. Sherer. His death occurred a few years later, when Miss Curtis entered the public schools as a teacher.

Her ability was soon recognized and promotion followed by a transfer to the normal staff at River Falls. This position she held until 1873, when she was appointed matron at the State School for Blind, where for the past twenty-six years she has rendered faithful and loving service. The best eulogy of any good life is its daily record. This is true of the woman whose life has just gone out. When the last chapter was written and the weary hands and tired feet refused to obey the will which had so long prompted to active service, there was nothing to be added, for the volume was complete.

It remained for the Master, in the first flush of Easter morn, to stamp the seal of approval. "Well Done." Conscious of the fact that the end was near, cheered by a hope which had long been to her as a great rock in a weary land, she passed on to her reward.

Miss Curtis was a woman of rugged character and strong personality. She was forceful and energetic, and the responsible position which she filled so faithfully and well for more than a quarter of a century, absorbed her being and filled the house with helpful influences.

More than any individual teacher or officer, she became the motive power for good and to her work is largely due the high standard of morality which the school has long enjoyed.

The blind children of the state found in the matron a large hearted motherly woman always ready to comfort and cheer in hours of homesickness and loneliness. She sacrificed the church, society, and pleasure for their comfort and enjoyment.

On a Sunday evening, when the little boys had been tucked away for the night with a good-night kiss, the King's Daughters would gather for an hour of council and suggestions, and as the classes graduated year after year the members carried with them the influence of this woman whose life had been devoted to serving them.

She edited a paper known as the Free Press, and sent it out in point language to the adult blind of the state. She knew of their struggles in the unequal contest, and was ever ready to lend a helping hand.

A good woman has gone and there will be mourning throughout the state by the people who never saw her, but who enjoyed the helpful touch of her presence.

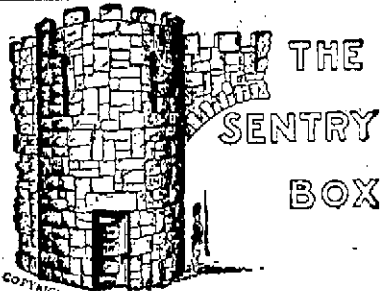

The immediate relatives are Mrs. Wood of Madison and her daughter Norma, who is teaching at Clinton. Mrs. Wood is a daughter of the aunt who gave Miss Curtis a home when her mother died. The funeral will be held at the school at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and the burial will occur at Oak Hill. Miss Curtis was a member of Trinity church.

DENNIS GALVIN DIES IN A HOSPITAL IN SPRINGFIELD

Man Who Went From Here to Illinois Capitol—Remains Await Claimants.

Dennis Galvin, who went from this city to Springfield, Illinois, is dead in that city. His demise occurred Thursday evening at the Mercy hospital and his remains were taken to the morgue of John J. Gleason, where they await claimants. Before Mr. Galvin passed away he gave the information that he had a nephew named Daniel Murphy living in Greenfield, Illinois.

Your persistent, annoying cough will disappear if you use Piso's Cure. 25c, half head.

GOOD ROADS.

One of the burning questions of the day, which has behind it strong influences and apparently an increasing popular increasing sentiment, is that of government aid in making good roads throughout the country.

This proposition is supported by many financial interests, also by manufacturers of bicycles and automobiles, in addition to the manifest interest which the farmers and village business men of towns and villages necessarily feel in the subject. A necessary condition of the proposition is that the measure should favor the measure of the extension of roads contribute to the extension of their trade, and are therefore profitable. Their support comes as a simple business proposition, and joins with other influences to advance the cause.

The property of the Federal Government entering into this scheme is widely questioned, but there are cogent arguments in its favor. If a merchant cannot send his goods upon the waterways of the nation, on account of shallows or sand-bars, the government removes the obstructions without expense to the merchant. If farm products cannot be brought readily from the farm to town, on account of impassable roads, why, it is asked, should not the government extend a helping hand? Local methods, long tried, are found to be inadequate. The almost universal habit of allowing the farmers to work out their road tax, instead of paying it in money, results probably in a loss of at least 50 per cent of the nominal amount of such tax.

The plan proposed by bills now pending in congress is co-operation between the national, state and county governments. Provision is made for an appropriation of $25,000,000, to be distributed among the states on condition that they respectively provide for at least an equal amount. Thus if the share of one state should be on million dollars, it must provide at least another million. The state returns offers to each county its share, conditioned on its raising at least one-third as much. By this means every dollar furnished from the United States treasury will, it is assumed, secure as a rule, nearly $3, cash expenditure, on the roads. As this expenditure is to be made under the inspection and supervision of government officials, the supposition is that the best possible results will be derived therefrom.

The value of good wagon roads to the commerce of a country must be conceded, when we remember that 95 per cent of all the trade handled by the railroads and steamships is first carried over the country roads. Hence the enormous aggregate waste, due to the fact that it might require four horses to haul a load which two horses should haul if the roads were good, or that it requires two days to haul what could be transported in one day—the farmer thus giving one-half of his time, so employed, to the bad roads cause.

It is estimated that the average farmer loses at least $100 a year to the cause of bad roads. This injures not alone the farmer but the village storekeeper, because the farmer might earn one hundred dollars a year more and have that much more to spend.

If one were called upon to decide which of the great American industries had in the last 40 years been most favorably affected by legislation, he would be obliged to say that farming was that industry. Much of this legislation has been only of indirect benefit, but it has all resulted in the farmer's favor, from the railroad subsidies, which open up vast territories for settlements, to the tariff schedules, which have amazingly deepened our manufacturing interests, and made home markets for agricultural products. All this favorable legislation has been of benefit to the whole people as well as to the farmer. Now if by improving the common roads of the country, another direct and manifest benefit can be conferred upon the agricultural population, who is there so blind to the general welfare as to interpose an objection?

At the proposed measures provide for the issue of local bonds to raise funds to pay for the building of the roads. This naturally meets with favor from that class of capitalists who prefer to invest in local securities rather than railroad or manufacturing enterprises. Some objection is made to this feature, but if properly regulated and restrained within reasonable bounds, it cannot be objectionable. Good roads of a permanent nature, like all other enduring improvements, are made not only for the benefit of this, but of succeeding generations. It is, therefore, not unfair that some of the burden of paying for them be transmitted to posterity.

The movement has already been of vast benefit in an educational point of view. The Department of Agriculture has sent through the country expeditions, equipped with machinery and manned by expert road-builders, who have in many states demonstrated the ease and certainty with which valuable improvements in this line may be made. Innumerable official publications on the subject have also been widely distributed, and have stimulated discussion in the public press. All these things combine to bring about good results, and if the movement should go no further, its benefits would be widespread and lasting.

But if a well-considered federal enactment, giving substantial pecuniary encouragement from the National Treasury, shall be put upon the statute books, it would be carrying out one of the earliest policies of the general government, and would, in the opinion of the SENTRY, be a long step in advance toward the goal of assured national prosperity.

BIG TOBACCO CROP NOW IN PROSPECT

Scarcity of Binder in New York Market and General Shortage, Enthusiasm Growers.

With the 1904 leaf and the old goods nearly all gathered in, the 1905 crop of Wisconsin tobacco should bring in a good price next fall. The reported shortage of binder stock on the New York market will also add to the enthusiasm of the Badger state grower. Money will occupy nothing but the producer if the weather is favorable. The very scarcity of leaf has caused a rash for that which is left, and though buyers are still riding the warehouse operations are slackening and the closing season is approaching. Out from Edgerton last week were shipped twenty cars of tobacco, in all a thousand cases. In the Janesville market some large deals have been made, as the following report will show:

John Soultman shipped 1 car of 1903; Geo. H. Rummell sold 258 cases of 1902-3, received 3 cars of the new at McFarland, 1 at Edgerton and 500 at Evansville for the week. S. S. Verhill made an immediate sale and delivery of 3000s of 1903 to Philadelphia tobacco men and Mr. T. A. Rich of Lancaster, Pa., bought well here in old leaf.

Capt. Campbell, the Friedman representative, was in the city lately looking after their Janesville end of the business.

Mr. F. J. Colman of Madison, was in the city Tuesday looking for binder stock.

J. A. Ryan has leased the J. T. DeForest warehouse and began, as sorting there last Monday with a force of forty hands.

MRS. JAMES BUNT DIES OF APOPLEXY

Succumbs Without Warning at Home on Cherry Street, Saturday Evening.

While in a condition of apparent good health and feeling no symptoms of illness, Mrs. James Bunt was stricken with apoplexy at her home on Cherry street, Saturday evening, and fell dead. Mrs. Bunt was taken sick with a slight stroke a number of weeks ago, but seemed to have completely recovered. Her sickness Saturday evening came very unexpectedly and though Dr. Pember was immediately summoned, she had departed this life before his arrival. Mrs. Bunt was fifty-four years of age and is well-known among the residents of Janesville, having lived here for many years. There are left to mourn her sudden demise many friends who held the deceased in high respect, a husband and five children—Mrs. Charles Hanson of this city, Mrs. Walter Anderson of Beloit and James, May and Frank Bunt who live at home.

Short funeral services over the remains will be held from the family residence tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The body will be shipped to Montfort, the former home of the deceased, at half-past eleven for burial. Funeral services will be held there Wednesday afternoon at half-past two.

Among those from out of the city who were called here by Mrs. Bunt's death were: Samuel James and Edward Frankland, brothers of the deceased, and Miss Bessie Frankland, of Montfort, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Anderson and Christopher Frankland of Beloit.

HOW AWARDS ARE GIVEN BRAVE MEN

Plan Whereby the Government is Enabled to Judge the Act of Bravery.

Papers are often making official notices of the awards of honor in the shape of medals for bravery that the government grants to brave and deserving patrons. In order to fully understand just what these medals may mean to the possessor it might be well to know how the medals are awarded according to law. According to the proclamation of President Roosevelt the following is the method of procedure in giving out the prizes:

1. Applications for medals under this act should be addressed to and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, at the city of Washington, D. C. Satisfactory evidence of the facts upon which the application is based must be filed in each case. This evidence should be in the form of affidavits made and standing, testifying of good repute and knowledge. The opinion of witnesses that the person for whom an award is sought acted with extreme daring and endangered his life is not sufficient, but the affidavits must set forth the facts in detail, and show clearly in what manner and to what extent life was endangered and extreme daring exhibited.

The railroad upon which the incident occurred, the date, the time of day, condition of the weather, the names of all persons present when practicable, and other pertinent circumstances should be stated. The affidavits should be made before an officer duly authorized to administer oaths, and be accompanied by the certificate of some United States official of the district in which the actants reside, such as a judge or clerk of United States court, district attorney, or postmaster, to the effect that the affidavits are reputable and credible persons. If the affidavits are taken before an officer without an official seal, his official character must be certified by the proper officer of a court of record under the seal thereof.

2. Applications for medals, together with all affidavits and other evidence received in connection therewith, shall be referred to a committee of five persons, consisting of the Secretary of the Commission, the chief inspector of safety appliances, two inspectors of safety appliances designated by the commission, and the clerk of the safety-appliance examining board, who shall act as clerk of the committee. This committee shall carefully consider each application presented, and, after thoroughly weighing the evidence, shall prepare an abstract or brief covering the case, and file the same, together with the committee's recommendation, with the commission.

3. The committee shall transmit the application of the President for his approval. The committee may, with the approval of the commission, direct any inspector of safety appliances in the employ of the commission to proceed to the locality where the service was rendered, and make a personal investigation and report upon the facts of the case, which report shall be filed and make a part of the evidence considered by the committee.

4. Upon final approval of the committee's recommendation by the President, the commission shall take such measure to carry the recommendation into effect as the President may direct.

5. The commission shall cause designs to be prepared for the medal, rosette and ribbon provided for by the act, which designs shall be submitted to the President for his approval. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

EASTER SERVICES AT ALL CHURCHES

Magnificent Music Marked the Day as an Especial Feast of the Churches

Easter services were held in all the churches in the city yesterday and beautiful Easter music was featured of each of the morning and evening services. At the Congregational church Rev. Denison took for his text, "Take ye away the stone." The Knights Templar participated in this service and a beautiful musical program was rendered. The evening service was largely attended and another magnificent program was rendered. At the Baptist church Rev. Vaughan took for his text, "The Power of an Endless Life," beautiful music being an important part in the day's services both afternoon and evening.

At the Central Methodist church elaborate music marked the morning service and in the evening the younger members of the church had charge of the services and gave a beautiful musical program. At the Presbyterian church the text for the morning sermon was "Easter Emphasizes the Faith." Both at the morning and evening services special musical numbers were sung. Mr. Atho Rollins being the soloist. The two services at Trinity church were well attended and the musical offerings most beautiful. Roy Carter was the soloist at both the morning and evening services. At Christ church Rev. Barrington took for his Easter sermon the text, "Easter Joy." In the evening a layman's service was held at which William Rorer, Jr., spoke. Rev. W. P. Christy of St. Peter's English Lutheran church took for his Easter text, "Personal Blessings and Consolations of Easter." The musical portion of the service was particularly good. At St. Mary's church also had special Easter music and special Easter services.

"IT'S TWINS."

Allen Abbott Passing Out Wadsworth Bros. Chico Cigars to His Friends. Happy man; it's twins. Happy friends; he's passing out Chico cigars.

Allen Abbott has kept the clerk at Smith Drug Co.'s store busy filling his orders for Wadsworth Bros. Chicoes the last twenty-four hours, as the arrival of twins at his house has brought a host of friends around with congratulations and nothing will do but "have a cigar."

Whether it's the arrival of twins, a smoke on the porch, or solid enjoyment at the ball game, or while waiting or driving, no cigar fills the bill better than Wadsworth Bros. Chicoes, sold by Smith Drug Co.

These cigars have a long Havana filler, and while they sell for five cents, are better than most cigars retailed at double the money.

Don't miss the pleasure of smoking a Chicoes. Get some today and see how good they are.

A GOOD WORD ABOUT RAIL-ROADS.

The atmosphere has recently been
so charged with evil reports about railways, says "Public Policy," it seems like a ray of sunshine breaking through clouds to hear something good about them. A railroad is a natural promoter of trade. Its entire business is to make exchanges of commodities. Anything that will promote the production of exchange-able commodities along the line of a railroad will promote the traffic of that road. It is, therefore, good business for a railroad company to engage in inducing persons to locate
on the line of its road, whatever their occupation may be. This is especially true of farmers. The farms must stay where they are. They cannot be dismantled and moved to some other locality. They must stay where they are and produce freight for the railroad to transport as long as they are worked.

Under the title of "Railway Enterprise Which Is Not Discouraged" an account is given of the enterprise in which southern railroads are engaged
to secure population for the southern states. This enterprise is so directly in line with the best interests
of those states it puts them almost
in the frame of mind people in the middle and western states were a few years ago when they were voting
county and township bonds to encourage railroad building.

This railroad immigration enterprise shows how vital productive industries are to railroad prosperity.
Clear-headed men, capable of managing such enterprises are certainly
too sagacious to deliberately stifle industry by exacting unreasonable
rates for the services they render.
The work they do and the price they charge for it is one of the greatest achievements of our day.

So much prejudice exists, just now,
against railway corporations, and so much is being said by public officials
against them, that it must be refreshing to this class of corporations to see a good word in their favor.

The state of Wisconsin enjoys a railway service not surpassed by any state in the Union, and any legislation which results in hampering this industry, whether resulting from prejudice or ignorance, will react on the state for years to come.

It is said, and the statement is generally true, that back of any great business enterprise is a spirit of selfishness. This is not only natural but just. The officials of railway companies are the agents of the stockholders who own the property.

The funds they handle are trust funds, and they hold positions of trust because of the confidence inspired in both honesty and ability.
The general public is their clientele
and field of operation and they are wise enough to know that self-interest demands fair treatment.

Every town along the line of the road is a customer, and every farmer
a prospective patron. It is idle to claim that either the townsman or farmer will be antagonized intentionally.

The railroad comes to the door of
every factory and mill in the state,
and by fair and equitable treatment
contributes to the development of industries for which the state is noted.
It pays the roads to do this but it
also pays the towns and industries
to have it done.

Janesville is a fair sample of what
the state enjoys in the way of railway benefits. Not less than $200,000
is invested in side tracks and switches. The companies made it possible
for the city to have a sugar factory,
and then by a nominal rate they enabled the farmers to market their crop. But, some one says, "It paid
the roads to do this." Why shouldn't it? Who is the loser?

What is true of Janesville is true
of hundreds of towns throughout the state, and when the magnitude of the service and benefits derived, are considered, it makes the antagonistic
spirit of the lawmakers at Madison
seem contemptible in the extreme.
The people are prosperous and content. It is a good time to let well enough alone.

Hundreds of excited women thronged
the store of Benedict & McFarlane
in Milwaukee, in an effort to dispose of a collection of blue tulle

stamps. The stamp business appears to be a little panicky just now,
and it's a good time for merchants
to abandon the enterprise and invest in profitable advertising.

Mayor Dunne of Chicago wants the legislature to authorize the city to start a gas plant. He expects to need more light to see the wheels go round when his city railway is in operation. The taxpayers will also need a little illumination to help them
figure out the expense account. The new mayor rattles around like a pea
in a pod.

Mr. S. C. Cobb, who recently returned from California, reports that 55 Wisconsin people attended Mr.
Wixom's funeral at Redlands, 35 of the number being from Janesville.
California is a favorite resort for Badgerites.

The native school man of Dakota is complaining because imported
teachers capture all the available
young men and enter into matrimonial alliances before they have been in the state a year.

Three thousand passengers at a single trip was the record recently made by the liner Pennsylvania, of the Hamburg-American line. This represents the population of a good-sized town.

Twenty-five threshing machines

The bachelors' bill is always a safe proposition for the assembly to

The Milwaukee Journal is of the opinion that the governor will go to the senate. The Journal frequently has another guess coming.

Milwaukee received 100,000 tons of coal last week which indicates that there will be no coal famine in Wisconsin this summer.

If administration measure are defeated in the senate the governor's forces will be responsible.

PRESS COMMENT.

Superior Telegram: It is announced that the St. Paul Globe will suspend publication. The Globe is conservative, democratic, impartial and is published in a state where the democracy
is overwhelmingly of the Bryan stamp. The presidential election of last fall made plain the fact that democracy can no longer maintain itself
as a conservative political organization. It must be radical or cease to exist. Henceforth it will be radical.
The conservative field is occupied by the republicans, but the republican party is less conservative than it was formerly. It has at present enough of the conservative policy and enough that is otherwise to suit the majority of the people. There is no longer a field for a conservative democratic newspaper anywhere in the United States. The Chicago Chronicle saw early what was coming and came over to the republicans. The Globe is in a field where there is already an abundance of republican state newspapers and there is no open republican journalistic ground. Therefore the Globe takes the wisest step that seems open to it—stops off the brink
and drops into oblivion.

He Thought He Stopped the Paper.
(From "Success Magazine.")
An acquaintance met Horace Greeley
one day, and said: "Mr. Greeley, I've stopped your paper."
"Have you?" said the editor. "Well, that's too bad." And he went his way.

The next morning Mr. Greeley met his subscriber again, and said: "I thought you had stopped the Tribune."
"So I did."

"Then there must be some mistake," said Mr. Greeley, "for I just came from the office and the presses
were running, the clerks were as busy
as ever, the compositors were hard at work, and the business was going on the same as yesterday and the day before."

"Oh," ejaculated the subscriber, "I didn't mean that I stopped the paper;
I stopped only my copy of it, because I didn't like your editorials."

"Pshaw!" retorted Mr. Greeley, "It wasn't worth taking up my time to tell me such a trifle as that. My dear sir, if you expect to control the utterance of the Tribune by the purchase of one copy a day, or if you think to find any newspaper or magazine worth reading that will never express convictions at right angles
with your own, you are doomed to disappointment."

Every publisher has this experience
with the irate patron who imagines
that the paper will have cold feet
when he withdraws his patronage.

The Gazette has on its subscription list in the city and county, between 6,000 and 7,000 subscribers. The paper is read every week by 35,000
people and this constituency represents all shades of political and religious belief.

It is not at all surprising, especially during state campaigns, that a man
now and then gets mad and stops
his paper, but the fact that the loss is made good before night by some other man who endorses its utterances saves financial loss.

It is well to remember that every publication possesses character and influence in proportion to its independence and fearlessness. The newspaper without a policy is like a man
without a purpose, and the man or paper who sacrifices either in an effort to please everybody, becomes a nonentity in short order.

Don't take a newspaper to help the publisher. He is seldom a pauper,
and it humiliates him to be placed on a charity list. Take it because you want it and because you believe that it is worth the money you pay.

The paper will manage to jog along. If you get mad some day and quit, and while the publisher may regret your hasty action, you will be the principal loser unless a good natured neighbor lends you a copy. You can't produce permanent disability
with a pin prick.

Places Head on Rails.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 24.—Frederick Uterbark, a saloonkeeper, committed suicide by deliberately knocking and placing his neck across the rail in front of a Lake Shore passenger train.

IF YOU WOULD BE YOUNG.

Keep in the sunlight; nothing beautiful or sweet grows or ripens in the darkness.

Avoid fear in all its varied forms of expression; it is the greatest enemy
of the human race.

Avoid excesses of all kinds; they are injurious. The long life must be a temperate, regular life.

Don't allow yourself to think on
your birthday, that you are a year older,
and so much nearer the end.

Never look on the dark side; take sunny views of everything; a sunny
thought drives away the shadows.

Be a child; live simply and naturally and keep clear of entangling al-
lances and complications of all kinds.

Cultivate the spirit of contentment;
all discontent and dissatisfaction
bring age furrows prematurely to the face.

Don't live to eat, but eat to live.
Many of our ills are due to overeating, to eating the wrong things, and to irregular eating.—Exchange.

SUNFLOWER PHILOSOPHY.

When it is said that a man is patient, the world believes it has found a hero.

When people who are not very well acquainted begin to gossip, a boy on thin ice doesn't feel his way more carefully.

Those women who look "as if a wind could blow them away," can usually sweep and dust all around their heavier sisters.

An Atchison girl whose name is June really looks like June. As a rule a girl whose name is June looks more like July or August.

Out in the country places, it's believed that no New York man ever pays his wife attention, and that if he did other New York men would laugh at him.—Atchison (Kan.)
Globe.

PASTE JEWELS.

She who hesitates has to hustle to catch up with Love.

Love that has to knock longest
usually lingers longest.

The last chapter of love-on-a-pall is usually christened Duty.

Poets are born just the same as
other poor unfortunates.

When you are dining with a poet—
send a few provisions on ahead.

There are certain phases of truthfulness with which no man will wound
a woman.

Life is a lottery and they who draw prizes generally lose them the next
turn of the wheel.—New Orleans Picayune.

TORNADO HITS WESTERN TEXAS

Blows Church Off Its Foundations and Does Other Damage.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 24.—A tornado passed over west Texas Sunday
and did much damage, but no lives are reported to have been lost. At Snyder
the Methodist church was blown off its foundation. Several residences were unroofed and windmills badly damaged. The tornado was blowing northeast. It struck Guthrie, in King county, several hundred miles northeast of here, wrecking the courthouse and destroying two residences. County Judge Ficht had a narrow escape in the courthouse. Joe Duren, son of the county clerk, was injured.

ROB TREASURY
OF GREAT SUM

STORY IS SENT OUT ON APRIL 1

Accuses Millionaires of Conspiring
With Cracksmen to Despoil the United States Government of $268,000,000
in Specie.

Washington, April 24.—All over Austria and Germany the story has been circulated that the United States
treasury has been looted of every dollar
by burglars in the employ of American millionaires; that $268,000,000
is gone; and that the North Atlantic squadron is chasing the cracksmen,
who escaped on five ocean steamers.

This piece of news was first printed in the Berlin Tagblatt, one of the principal German papers, April 1, and within two days it was published all over both countries and taken seriously. So much interest has it inspired that one diplomatic corps has received from an excellent fellow countryman
a copy of the Posther Lloyd of Buda-Pesth, one of the most respectable and influential papers of Austria, which printed the story with the request that any further news about it may be communicated.

The story appeared in the Posther Lloyd April 3. It is entitled "The robbery of millions from the United States treasury," and reads as follows:

"The New York correspondent of the Berlin Tagblatt reports a crime
which has no parallel in the annals of the world, one almost incredible, and with consequences that cannot yet be estimated. He says:

"A most abominable crime was
perpetrated night before last in Washington. A gang of criminals working with many millions of capital has successfully carried through what was always considered impossible, namely,
to burglarize the United States treasury and to take from it $268,000,000
in gold and silver.

How Burglars Worked.
"The abominable deed was carried out in the following diabolically
refined manner:

"It had been planned for years.
The criminals, who, as it is believed,
acted at the instance of certain American millionaires and had millions and millions at their disposal, had built an electro technical factory in 1902
on the left bank of the Potomac.

"From this factory a tunnel was dug—almost a mile long, thirty feet
below the river bed, and ending directly under the treasury in a large caseism. From there thirteen shafts were dug upward, each ending directly under one of the thirteen treasury
vaults.

Employ—Submarines.
"Thus, it was possible to cut out
the chambers and to remove the contents within a short time into the tunnel, where the gold and silver

were transferred to electric cars and
in this manner carried to the factory.
From here transportation was effectively by means of a fleet of at least twenty submarine boats to large ships
waiting in the open sea.

"It had been positively ascertained
that these ships went through the Chesapeake bay to the ocean, where no fewer than three and probably five large steamers were lying under steam. These vessels took on board the precious freight as well as the transport boats with all their crews.
"The whole north Atlantic squadron has been ordered to search for the criminals could have taken. All the cruisers in the Gulf of Mexico, as well as in the Caribbean sea, will join in the chase. In addition to this, the fastest ships stationed in Pacific ports
have been sent south with orders to await further instructions in Chilean ports."

Weak Soup.

Sir Percy Sanderson, the British consul general in New York, was talking
on the Ettruria about a weak soup.

"As good a description of weak soup
as I know," he said, "came from the lowly lips of a poor woman in the east end of London. She was destitute last winter, and a parish visitor advised
her to apply for soup at a neighboring soup kitchen.

"She got some soup, but she did not like it. This is what she said of it to the visitor when he called next day:

"Do you call that stuff soup? Why,
all they do is to get a quart of water
and boil it down to a pint to make it strong."—Baltimore Herald.

What the Baby Said.

Dr. George F. Shady asked another medicine man at a recent meeting of a number of the fraternity if he had ever heard of a three-months-old baby talking. "Oh," said the other, "of course it is very unusual, but I was called once to attend a sick infant of that age. The case was desperate and past all hope of relief. I was sitting watching for its last gasp when the mother said: 'Doctor, is there nothing
that can be done to save my baby?'
And I replied: 'Nothing, absolutely nothing. Just then the baby opened its eyes and said nothing, absolutely nothing, and died.'—Argonaut.

In Pastel Colors.

Suavity of line and delicacy of tint
characterize the art of advertising in Japan.

"Our silks and satins are as soft as
the cheeks of a pretty woman, as beautiful as a rainbow," announces one progressive house.

"Our parcels are packed with as much care as a young married woman
takes of her husband," says another.
"Our wrapping paper is as strong as the hide of an elephant. Goods forwarded with the speed of a cannonball," boasts another merchant of the
"hustler" type; oriental variety.—

Poverty and Education.
Poverty is a great bar to education,
but would not be if both the child
and the parent were alive to the real value of an education. If education cannot be acquired in one way it can in another. The trouble is that the judgment of the child is too immature
to prove a safe guide, and the parent
leaves everything to the child.

WOULD ASSESS AT FULL VALUE

F. P. STARR APPEALS TO JUDGES OF COUNTY PROPERTY.

TO SCALE UP ESTIMATES

Says Ratio of Assessment to Sale Valuations Has Ranged As Low As Twenty Per Cent.

In his address before the county assessors this morning Supervisor of Assessment F. P. Starr argued that real property in the county, as required by law, should be assessed at the full value which could ordinarily be obtained therefor at a private sale and that personal property should likewise be assessed at its true cash value. Lists of sales of real estate during the year 1904 and the considerations were submitted and these were to aid in determining not only the value of the property sold but also like property that had not been sold. In the past some of the districts had assessed at too low a valuation, fearing that they might get the worst of it when the county equalization. There were no grounds for this fear as the county board was not bound by law to accept the valuations made by assessors in any assessment district. The ratio of assessment values to those shown in sales had been all the way from 22 to 50 per cent of the real values in the past. Nothing had been gained by this as the county board had been compelled to disregard these valuations in the equalization work just as the state tax commission had disregarded the full county valuation. In conclusion he urged all to conform to the law and assess at full value. Seventeen topics such as assessment of bank stock, separate valuations for improvements on real property, the valuation and assessment of leaf tobacco, were discussed this afternoon. F. P. Livermore, chairman of the county board, made an address at the latter session.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK WAS FILLED WITH SMOKE

And Fire Department Broke in Side Window and Made an Investigation.

Chancing to pass by the First National bank about seven o'clock last evening, E. V. Whitton noticed that the interior was apparently filled with smoke and hastened to inform the fire department. An official from the first side hose-house hastened to the scene and after peering in the front window turned in the alarm. None of the bank officials could be found and it was necessary to break in a side window. Chief Klein made an investigation but could not find the source of the smoke. The only theory offered was that it came from a back draft from the furnace below.

CITY HALL CAT PARTOOK OF POISON AND EXPIRED

Presence Will Be Missed in Council Chamber Where She Was Welcome Visitor. "Lady May," the city hall cat, met a tragic death at the hands of the poisoner Saturday, and George Phillips the janitor is heart-broken. Some incline to the theory that the little feline grieved over the departure of old time friends in the old council and voluntarily ended her life. This theory, however, is scarcely tenable when it is remembered that she drank from the mayor's pitcher of ice-water with her customary abandon and subsequent last Thursday evening. The little animal first came to the city hall several months ago, an unkempt, batted, homeless waif.

LADIES AS GUESTS OF TWILIGHT CLUB

Will Enjoy a Discussion of "Vacation Days" Tomorrow Evening—Banquet for 300.

"Vacation Days" will be the topic for discussion tomorrow evening before the Twilight Club at the Ladies' Night session and concludes the year's series of meetings. The program will be varied with music furnished by the mandolin club. An elaborate repast will be prepared for three hundred guests who will be seated promptly at half past six o'clock. Thomas S. Nolan will act as master of ceremonies and the subjects and speakers will be as follows: "Canadian Pacific Scenery," M. G. Jeffries; "The Shasta Route and the Pacific Coast," Dr. S. B. Buckmaster; "The Yellowstone National Park," Colonel T. W. Goldin; "Colorado," Rev. R. M. Vaughan; "The Grand Canyon," Judge Charles L. Field.

Chicago Chronicle: Restaurant-keepers must think strawberries are rubber—the way they stretch them over a shortcake.

Madison Democrat: Still the yellow peril must not be permitted to scare us into leaving the lawn unranked.

Milwaukee Free Press: Dwight, Ill., the home of the original Keweenaw, has voted to have saloons, the first time in twenty-four years.

Racine Journal: By proclamation of Governor La Follette April 23rd will be celebrated as Arbor day. Let every householder plant a tree.

Milwaukee News: Perhaps, if the czar had not bragged so much about his gold reserve, the Japs would not have thought of collecting an indemnity.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: The half-combination of France and Russia is rather more than the Japs bargained for. It is a long way removed from fair play or straightforward dealing.

Baltimore Sun: To show that a man can overcome even the most serious mistakes of his youth, we cite that Theodore Roosevelt when he graduated from Harvard wore sidewhiskers.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The mystery of the Stanford case seems destined to go down in history along with the question of what became of Charlie Ross and where did Pat Crow go after he left Omaha?

Evansville Review: Two cousins by name of Rich Creek of Janesville, were married Monday last. The groom is from Philadelphia and the bride a resident of this county. Both are well off and the uniting of the two makes the creek richer by many millions.

La Crosse Leader-Press: The demands of the Equitable agents for the resignation of Vice President Hyde are characterized by that gentleman as "impertinent, extraordinary, insulting and preposterous," and as Mr. Hyde is the owner of this company he may be excused for thus designating the action of his employees.

Monroe Sentinel: The slot machines in this city have been ordered out by Marshal Blunt, presumably through instructions from the mayor. The machines were being played a little too strong by the "kids." City slot machines where at least one cigar is given with every nickel will be undisturbed, as there is nothing to lose, though a possibility of gain.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: The troubles of the young Mr. Hyde, vice president of the Equitable Life Assurance society, seem to have multiplied very rapidly since the occasion of his dinner party, which made the notorious Seeley affair look like the proverbial "30 cents." Even the general agents have rebelled against him and signed a "round robin" in which they asked for his resignation. Mr. Hyde declares this an imprudent piece of business, on the part of the agents, and it probably is—from his point of view. The agents, however, are the ones who get the business and that's what counts.

Madison Journal: Congressman H. A. Cooper is booked to join a trip arranged by Secretary of War Taft to the Philippines this summer. The party of about sixty members of the senate and house leave San Francisco by Pacific mail steamer July 1st for a three months' absence. The itinerary has the steamer touch at Honolulu, Yokohama and several Japanese ports before landing at Manila where the party will remain ten days, being entertained by the Philippine commission which bears the expenses of transportation of the government officials who take the trip. After visiting Manila the party will take a government transport and spend twenty days in a tour of the commercial points in the southern islands.

"GIRL AND BANDIT" SCORED A BIG HIT

Light Opera Presented by Best Singing Organization of Season Saturday Evening.

Eccentric little Mabel Hite, pensive and sad of mien, who babbled delicious absurdities in a plaintive, far-away voice; Joseph Miron, the raffish bandit with the starched ruffles and the deep basso; stately Viola Gillette, singing in a full, round mezzo soprano on the piazzas of Venice the love ballads that maddened the love-lorn sailors; Walter Jones, who made his audience laugh for no cause they could explain; sweet, sprightly little Alice Dovey with the silvery voice; the four dancing dolls whose cyclonic gyrations were almost too swift for the eye to follow; Harry Carter, the romantic lover; Neil McNeil, whose comical antics brought back recollections of Eddie Foy; it would be hard to determine which of these gave the greatest pleasure to the fortunate ones who were present at the Myers theatre Saturday evening.

"The Girl and the Bandit" is light opera presented by the best singing organization that has visited Janesville since Francis Wilson. The work of the sextette composed of Miss Gillette, Miss Dovey, Miss Seabrooke, and Messrs. Miron, MacFarlane, and Meekins has perhaps never been equaled here. Of Miss Gillette's many offerings "Violetta Mia" and "The Man in the Moon" are especially pleasing and "The Tale of the Snowflake" which she sings with Miss Dovey is one of the gems of the opera. Miss Hite and Mr. Miron score a big hit in that character song, "The Goblin Man," and with Walter Jones call forth repeated encores in "The Coroner Said 'Oh.'" George MacFarlane's "The Toast" is another of the delightful contributions.

One stage picture, situation, or song follows another with such rapidity that there is no opportunity for interest to lag and the offering is so well balanced that every feature seems immeasurably better than the preceding one.

Joseph Miron's manner and methods as well as his part of the chief of the bandits reminded many very forcibly of William Wolf, who appeared here a short time ago as "Pericles, proprietor of the Plucked Pigeon" with Paula Edwards' production of "Winsome Winnie." So much so that many declared they were one and the same.

The costumes were beautiful and the scenic effects very pleasing. The company left yesterday for Milwaukee, where they were booked for one evening before their return to the Studebaker, Chicago.

The book and lyrics of "The Girl and the Bandit" were written by Mrs. A. C. Tyler and J. Cheever Goodwin and the music was composed by Frederick Colt-Wright.

High Class Baseball This Year

Absence of Club and League Quarrels Has Greatly Improved Work of Individual Players. Men Can't Loaf and Hold Positions Now.

The baseball season is on in full swing. In the major leagues the various teams are playing in such excellent form, with some few exceptions, as to cause wonder concerning the duration of this happy state of affairs. To the trained observer it seems evident that a majority of the American and National league teams are playing better ball at present than was ever known before at this early stage of the season. Of course southern training trips are responsible for good form in opening contests, but the teams particularly noticed in this respect have been for years in the habit of training in the south. Clearly some other reason exists at the bottom of this unusual brilliancy before the warm summer days loosen the joints of the veterans. To the mind of the writer, the solution of the question lies in the enhanced that pervades the wide world of baseball management. At no time in the last six or seven years has baseball politics been so devoid of disturbing influences.

The Effect Is Most Important.
"How does that fact affect the players?" some one is heard to ask. It affects the rank and file of the diamond sharps in a most decided manner. Man-

well that when leagues clash in open combat the contending parties seek to capture on almost any terms the best men of the rival organization. The players know that they will be paid extra sums to remain with their original employers, no matter what kind of a game they play. Consequently they fail to take proper care of themselves, and it becomes a matter of indifference to them as to whether or not they make one error or eight in a contest.

It is a matter of authenticated baseball history that certain players in the National league who desired to sign with the American league during the comparatively recent war deliberately made every effort possible to defeat their own team in league games.

At Peace, but Not Friends.
Therefore it appears to the writer that the principle reason for the noticeable improvement in early ball playing this year is the universal spirit of peaceableness outward, at least—that permeates the green diamond arena. Although the National and American leagues are at peace, it is by no means asserted that they are friends. They will never be friends, but the dictators, realizing the deplorable accompaniments of internecine warfare, are willing to compromise and be nice, good little boys. This peaceful atmosphere places the players before the public as the most important feature of the game—as well they should be. The men have got to play good ball to hold their positions. No more fancy gill topped war salaries will dazzle their eyes for some time. It's a case of play hard and fast for daily bread or else accept annihilation to decorate the bench for the remainder of the season.

Couldn't Oust Powers.
The attempt to oust "Stalling Pat" Powers from the presidency of the Eastern league was an ignominious failure, and the result of the rebellion was a credit to the league. Mr. Powers has made the minor leagues what they are today. He is a fighter among fighters, and were it not for his untiring efforts the major leagues would have the minor completely at their mercy.

The discontents who wanted Mr. Powers to abdicate the throne he has honored are men who would not be

CURE OF COLDS.

In my last lecture I mentioned the various methods by which a person may "catch cold," and described just what a cold really is. In this paper I will give the management of colds, and will start out with some general facts which should be observed in all cases. When you realize that you have caught cold do not make the mistake of going into a room that is too warm. It is a common mistake to seek a warm spot as can be found and strive to heat the surface beyond endurance. The effect is precisely the same as the well-known results of putting frozen or very cold feet in front of a hot fire to "roast them." When you come out of the cold with the consciousness of being thoroughly chilled enter a room that is comfortably warm, at a temperature of about 68 or 70 degrees. If such a temperature does not overcome the chilliness, do not stir up the fire and overheat the room. If you do you will almost certainly resolve a slight cold into a severe one. I will mention below what to do in case chilliness cannot be overcome by ordinary warmth of a room. In all cases avoid sitting in a draught of air, even a warm draught; but be sure that the room is well ventilated, for bad air will only aggravate a cold. This is a more important matter for consideration than is at first thought apparent. Where the lungs are congested and inflamed and the circulation disturbed, the air that enters the lungs to purify the blood should of itself be pure, and not add extra work. Another thing must be remembered: Do not, when thoroughly chilled, remain in a hot room that is filled with dry air. It is better to put a vessel of water upon the stove or over the register to provide a little moisture.

The chilliness and shivering which so often accompany the first stages of a cold are largely due to the great disturbance in the circulation of blood in the capillaries or minute blood vessels of the surface, but they are also due to the impression of cold made upon the nervous system through the millions of tiny nerves distributed upon the surface. How few persons realize that the nerves have anything to do with chilliness! But it is a fact that the sense of chilliness is always one of nervous impression, and the nerves are always more or less depressed during a cold. The first object to be accomplished in striving to "break a cold" is to overcome the chilliness and depression. If this can be done quickly all danger may be averted right in the start. Here an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and energy and thoroughness are most profitable. Work here may seem bothersome. It is nothing compared with the labor of nursing a cold or treating a case of pneumonia, or bronchitis, or consumption, which neglect might easily permit to develop. The best possible method of securing an equilibrium of the circulation is energetic exercise, but if this cannot be well taken, then after the body has become accustomed to the temperature of the room, place the feet in hot water. It is best to use a deep vessel or tub and have the water up to the knees. From time to time add hot water to keep it as hot as can possibly be borne. Keep the feet in such a bath from 15 to 30 minutes, or even longer. Then withdraw them, just after adding hot water; dry them thoroughly, and wrap them in a woolen blanket, previously heated, and get into bed. This will give a delicious sense of comfort. If the feet and limbs are clammy, as well as cold, it is a good plan to add a little vinegar or acetic acid to the water. It is also good, after the feet and limbs have been thoroughly dried, to rub them with hot olive oil before wrapping them in the woolen blankets. If the body is very cold: especially if "creepy" sensations are experienced in the back, it is advisable, while the foot bath is being taken, to sip some hot infusion, such as hot lemonade containing ginger or nutmeg, or even simply hot water as hot as it can be sipped. Probably the best drink of all is ginger tea. This is best prepared by putting a half-teaspoonful of powdered ginger in a coffee cup with a teaspoonful of granulated sugar, mixing thoroughly, and then filling the cup with boiling water and adding cream as for coffee. This is delicious if sipped hot.

It is often necessary to keep sipping this hot infusion after going to bed, until the surface of the body becomes comfortably warm and moist. At the same time a hot-water bottle or heated iron may be placed to the feet—the object being to draw the blood away from the overworked organs above, and to allow the discharge of secretions through the skin.

When the cold seems deep-seated it is an excellent plan to wet two folded towels in cold water and place one upon the back and the other over the chest, and cover them with a dry towel. The cold water soon becomes heated and softens the skin and starts the circulation of the blood outward and allows the escape of impure material directly over the affected organs.

Some persons are averse to drinking hot infusions, or are so situated that they cannot prepare them; such may be greatly benefited by using ordinary red pepper: every six hours in quantities sufficient to fill a No. 5 capsule. Ginger and red pepper are not harmful drugs. They are in reality, concentrated stimulating foods.

Do not, under any circumstances, use whisky, brandy or other alcoholic liquors in an attempt to break a cold. Alcohol in every form is a poison. It is a false stimulant. It arouses the circulation only by its irritating properties, and its use is always followed by a period of greater or less depression. If possible, keep indoors for two or three days after breaking a cold, and if the lungs have been involved, stay indoors a week or longer. This may interfere with business or other engagements, but it is a serious matter to expose yourself to severe cold too soon after relaxing and softening the surface and while the lungs are still sensitive.

The question of diet also arises when there is sickness of any kind. Some persons say "Starve a cold," others say "Feed a cold." It is evident that when the internal organs are crowded with blood and are endeavoring to get rid of the waste material that should have been thrown off by the skin they should not be burdened in other ways. Let the diet always be light, but nourishing and easily digested. Soup and broths are excellent, and such other foods as may be selected from these that I have mentioned in these papers and most easily digested. Let the bowels be kept freely open, for they are very apt to become constipated during the course of a cold. But don't use harsh physics. Large enemata of warm water at such times may be used to advantage.

CLUB NOTES.

Minnesota.—Dr. David H. Reeder, La Porte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: I would very much like to know how the beginning of nervous disorders manifests itself. I am troubled with stitches in left side of the back. These are worst in the morning, especially when I bend over. I am 55 years old and have not been sick for 24 years. I have never taken any medicines, as our family have always used hydrotherapy (treatment with water). If this is a nervous disorder can you direct me to a cure? J. O.

In regard to your special inquiry, you have asked a question which a whole book would hardly encompass. General information in regard to nervous troubles and their treatment, may be found in the Home Health Club books, which are described in the circulars which I have sent you. As these books are valuable additions to the household and study them, and get the information for yourself on the subject. The stitches you describe may be due to other causes besides those of nervous origin, and I am inclined to think that probably in your case it may be fecal impaction. This being the case, I would recommend a thorough enema, and the vegetable herb remedy which has so often been given in Club Notes. To take the enema, lie upon the left side, with the hips elevated about six inches, and inject from one to one and a half quarts of water into the colon. The water should be about blood heat.

I would be glad to have you join the club, and receive the benefits therefrom.

Wisconsin.—Dr. David H. Reeder, La Porte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: I have read with much interest your valuable articles in this paper, and note that we are at liberty to come to you for advice. For a couple of years my nose has been red and swollen at the tip. I consulted a doctor about a year ago, who said it was catarrh. My nose never seems to be stopped up, but I take cold easily. I am also troubled with pimples on my face. Had an operation for boils on my neck about two years ago. Aside from these difficulties I feel well. I am 21 years old. Kindly give me any suggestions which you think would aid me in getting rid of my red nose, which is embarrassing, to say the least. Very truly yours, Miss T.

The trouble is of a two-fold nature. One is inactivity of the organs of elimination, and the other is faulty capillary circulation. Catarrh may also aggravate the trouble. Practice the deep breathing exercises given in the club books; also the exercises for the cure of catarrh. Make the skin of the entire body more active and also increase the elimination of waste through other organs. To accomplish these results take a cold bath every morning as soon as you arise. Keep the scalp clean, eat freely of juicy fruits and vegetables and drink an abundance of water between meals. Masticate all your food thoroughly; chew each morsel until it is like liquid in the mouth. The vegetable herb remedies would also be good for you.

Readers of this paper are at liberty to write for information on subjects pertaining to health. All communications should be addressed to Dr. David H. Reeder, La Porte, Ind., and must contain name and address in full and at least four cents in postage.

Uganda Customs.
In his book, "Uganda and Its Peoples," J. F. Cunningham tells of a curious manner of treating the sick among a certain native African tribe: "When a person fell ill the village prophet was called in. He said at once whether the sick person would recover or not. If he was doomed to die, he was allowed to fulfill the prophecy; if he was to live there was no need of medical aid." Another strange custom is explained in the words of the native who, when asked by the author why women were not allowed to eat the flesh of goats, replied: "There is no why; it is the custom."

Mounter and Taylor

Mounter and Taylor were two dogs who lived together on Mr. Bentley's farm. Mounter had made up his mind that Taylor should not cross a fence ahead of him, and when he did so there was certain to be a fight. One day Taylor not only jumped the fence of Mounter, but whipped him in the fight that followed. Mounter made up his mind to get even, and the next day he showed Taylor where Aunt Nancy, the cook, had left a jar of preserves. Taylor was very fond of sweet things, and Mounter thought he would eat the preserves and be punished for it, but Taylor did much worse than that. He kept pushing his head into the jar to get the very last slice of preserve, and the small neck of it slipped over his ears. When he tried to pull back he could not get his head out.

Aunt Nancy, mistaking him for some dreadful wild beast, screamed till Mr. Bentley brought his gun. Taylor came very near being shot, but just in time his master saw that it was a dog with a brown preserve crock on his head instead of a wolf that had got into the smokehouse. When Mr. Bentley broke the crock he hit Taylor's head pretty hard, but that was part of his punishment. As the two dogs walked off together poor Taylor said, "I'll never eat preserves again as long as I live."

And Mounter said, "You'd better promise yourself not to jump over any more fences ahead of me."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Sad Ending

Fishing was poor. Little Bill had dangled his bob in the river all the morning. He had baited his hook with the choicest worms extracted from his mouth, where he had been carrying them because he couldn't find a can. But the fish simply wouldn't nibble.

"It's dead mean," he muttered, kicking the gravel into the water. "They always bite in school time, but they never will when it's vacation. Seems as if they sorter wanted to tempt a fellow to play hooky." But while he fished there was something going on in Fishland, just under the waves.

"Perfectly ridiculous; perfectly ridiculous," snapped Mr. Sunfish.

"What is?" meekly asked his wife.

"Why, to imagine that we can't take a vacation too. Do you see that worm dangling just above us? It's been there all day, and there it can stay for all the trouble I shall give it. I tell you, it's ridiculous. I've struck. Here we are expected to spend our time hitting on silly wriggling worms day after day and day after day all summer, just to keep these fishermen amused."

"YOU'LL NEVER COME BACK."

"What can you do about it?" his wife feebly suggested.

"I shall take a vacation myself," he said decidedly. "Get my things ready!"

"Never heard of such a thing!" exclaimed his wife excitedly. "A fish taking a vacation just like the common schoolboys and poor teachers! You must be daff."

"Daff, nothing! Get my grip packed." Mrs. Sunfish obeyed, and soon Mr. S. was ready.

"Where do you go?" she asked.

"To the sea, of course, you silly!"

"You'll never come back," she said sadly.

And he never did, for the salt water killed him, while Mrs. Sunfish died of a broken heart, all of which shows that we don't always have to go away from home to be happy.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

Mrs. Emma Sawyer.

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a brick-dust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and tell every suffering woman about my case."

Best Medicine He Ever Used for Stomach, Liver and Kidneys.

Read this letter to us from Mr. Alex. J. Walker, of Springfield, Ill., which we received on September 12, 1904: "Seven Barks is the best medicine I have ever used for Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. It certainly will cure indigestion, constipation, together with all their allied diseases. As a tonic for run-down men and women, there is no better medicine. I will ever remain a friend to Seven Barks."

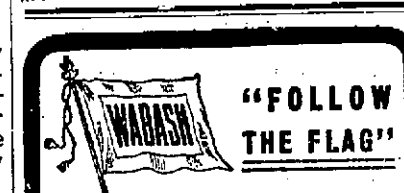

When a man knows his stomach is "out of order," he looks about to find a cure. That's what Mr. Walker did, as his letter gives evidence of having tried other remedies, because he refers to Seven Barks as being the best. We sell Seven Barks, because people tell us it's the best tonic for a weak Stomach they've ever used. These people could all come here and get their money back if Seven Barks didn't cure. But how long do you suppose our customers would trade here if we sold them a worthless remedy? Seven Barks is purely vegetable, and pleasant to take. A full-size bottle costs 50 cents. No cure, no pay. Try it.

She courted stung, and he, after mending his head, strode through the open doorway and, mounting his horse, rode toward the village.

At the sound of the closing of the door Margaret ran to the window and threw open the lattice, exclaiming with a shiver: "Tis damp and musty in this room, or else 'tis my cousin's proposition that hath chilled me. I'll bet the sunshine in, and Giles can put some logs to burn in the chimney place. Prithce, the room must be warm and cheerful for Godfrey, who," she whispered happily, "now that the storm is broken, will come ere nightfall."

For a time she looked out of doors, humming a gay tune lightly, then, leaving the room, ran up the stairs and, bursting into the chamber where Elisabeth was sitting mending linen, stood before her with flushed face and sparkling eyes.

"What frock shall I wear for Godfrey, Elisabeth?"

"Sir Godfrey hath come?" The woman laid down her work and looked at Margaret in surprise, who answered pettishly: "Nay, dullard. How could he travel in such awful storms o'er mountain roads he knows not?"

She drew a piece of paper from her bosom, reading slowly: "Tuesday I shall reach the inn at Hackvon, lay there one night and will be with thee on the morrow, Wednesday."

She raised the paper to her lips.

"Thus reads his missive, Elisabeth. Thoult remember that the storm rose wild Wednesday, now six days gone by. An' so, ah, me," she sighed dismally, "poor Godfrey hath been imprisoned all these dreary hours in that foul tavern, the Puritan, where we were forced to rest when we journeyed hither." For a moment she was silent. "But the storm hath broken and set him free!" she cried triumphantly, lifting her radiant face to the sunlight. "And now, I promise thee, he rideth fast to Cragenstone!"

Suddenly she grew more serious and, seating herself on a little stool at Elisabeth's feet, rested her elbows on the woman's lap above the mending, covered her face with her hands and appeared to be in deep thought.

"What thinkest thou, Elisabeth, of my cousin Josiah?" she asked after a time. "He hath the appearance of an upright man and godly," the other replied

"Take time to think on the words I have just spoken."

thoughtfully, "but, I ween, hard and stern, even above his kind, who, with their long, sad faces, do dwell upon this mountain."

"He asked this morning to wed with me," Margaret observed quietly.

"What saidst thou?" Elisabeth exclaimed, indignation in her tone and glance. "The same visaged churl, to want my bonny Margaret! Didst tell him of Sir Godfrey?"

"Nay," blushing softly. "There are few, to whom I care to say that name."

SKIN DISEASES

Altosna, Pa., June 20, 1903.

I was afflicted with Tetter in bad shape. It would appear in blotches as large as my hand, a yellowish color, and scale off. You can imagine how offensive it was. For twelve years I was afflicted with this trouble. At night it was a case of scratch and many times to rest at all. Seeing the good the medicine was doing a friend who was taking it for Eczema, I commenced it, and as a result the eruption began to dry up and disappear, and to-day I am practically a well man. Only two tiny spots are left on the elbow and shin, where once the whole body was affected. I have every confidence in the medicine, and feel sure that in a short time these two remaining spots will disappear. S. S. S. is certainly a great blood purifier, and has done me a world of good. I am grateful for what it has accomplished, and trust that what I have said will lead others who are similarly afflicted to take the remedy and obtain the same good results that I have.

one—one heart and one soul forever!"

Then, after a deep felt silence, she added in brighter tones, "But, prithce, come, the peachblow gown an' happy faces, for this is a joyful day, good Elisabeth!"

CHAPTER VII.

AT the open door of the kitchen Mistress Taunston sat before her spinning wheel, busy with distaff and spindle, and at intervals as she paused in her work looked longingly toward the fertile lands of the Maryland farm. But her thoughts, never far from her son Josiah, soon strayed back to him.

"E'en now he is at his wooing," she said to herself with stern exultation. "an' I pray the good Lord who is ever watchful of the faithful to put persuasive and convincing words on my lad's lips and guide him to the most proper conduct."

For a time she seemed lost in thought until her distaff, falling from under her arm, came to the floor with a rattling noise that roused her. Then the remembrance of Herty, who upon her arrival from her cousin's had been sent to the brook to fill the ewers, coming to her mind, she suddenly looked at the sun. Finding the hour to be later than she had at first supposed, her irritation and anger caused by her daughter's delay at the brook knew no bounds. She called the girl's name shrilly once, twice, muttering angrily as she got no response.

Just then Josiah rode in from his visit to the Maryland farm. "Cease thy shrewish screaming, mother!" he commanded roughly. "Doest wish to rouse the village? Thy voice can be heard half a mile below."

The dame, angered at his rebuke, resumed her seat in sullen silence, and Josiah took his horse to the barn. In a short time he returned and, entering the kitchen, threw himself down heavily on a chair near his mother, who continued to spit busily without apparently heeding his presence.

"At last he broke the silence by saying with affected carelessness: 'Thou didst not tell me—if my memory serves me well on so slight a matter—of what appearance the cavalier was that rode by Haggott's and mistook the Stern-dorf road. Was he an unburied gallant, fickle and changeable as the wind, one day mad in love with a pretty face and forgetting it the next, or was he old and gray haired, with an eye to finishing his days in comfort on the estate of his bride?'"

His mother looked out through the doorway, reflectively maintaining for a moment or two a provoking silence. After what seemed to the impatient Josiah an interminable length of time she remarked with ill concealed eagerness: "Thou wert successful in thy wooing, Josiah, and ask now of thine enemy's appearance in order that thou mayst know the extent of thy triumph?"

"As to that matter, nothing is definitely settled," he replied impatiently. "I will explain our understanding later, mother, when the hour is not at hand and the animals to be fed. Canst not find words to answer my question?" he cried out in harsh tones. "Didst thou see this Frenchman plainly? Of what appearance was he?"

With quiet deliberation, which was in direct contrast to her son's excited manner, she commenced her narrative.

"Josiah, I ha' told thee of the gallant's sudden appearance at good Brother Haggott's door, of his loud knocking and of how from my place behind the lattice I observed him carefully."

"Aye, thou hast, but naught else," Josiah interposed with eagerness.

"His age, mother? Of what age looked he?"

"Methought as I saw him that the knight was getting on to thirty summers, maybe, one or two more," she said. "He was large of stature and finely built, with gray eyes and brown pointed beard worn in the French fashion. A round hat with sweeping feather covered his hair, long leather riding boots reached to his hips, and his doublet was of ruby velvet, with black satin slashes. Good son Josiah!" she laid her hand on his arm with an expression of feeling unusual with her.

"He presented such a dazling picture to mine eyes that for the nonce—knowing that oft to silly women the sight of rich and tawdry dress doth weigh heavily against piety, honesty and worth of character—a feeling of insecurity, apprehension and alarm for thy prospects so filled my mind that I saw the man who would supplant thee ride bravely away in the wrong direction with exultation and a feeling of gratitude to God for his gracious protection of us, ever his righteous and faithful servants," she concluded in her most devout manner.

"Sprung to his feet, Taunston paced the room with nervous strides, occasionally pausing to look out of the window or to stand stern and gloomy before the chimney fire. Suddenly, as if unable to contain himself longer, he made a sharp exclamation and, going to his mother, who had resumed her spinning, cried desperately: 'Mother, I ha' sworn that those lands shall be mine! An' the knowledge that there is an enemy approaching with intent to baffle my desire doth set me on the verge of frenzy.'"

A Pirate's Bold Life

Deeds of a Buccaneer Who Sailed the Spanish Main.

Adventurous Indeed Were the Games of the Pirate Chief Roche Brazilliano—His Courage and Cruelty.

The bloodthirsty buccanniers who in days of old were the scourge of the Caribbean sea and the Spanish main and whose nefarious deeds have inspired so many writers of stories of the "blood and thunder" type are, strange to say, little known to modern readers. Perhaps this fact is due to the chronicler Esquemeling's callous narrative, which is thought unfit for readers of the twentieth century. Esquemeling was himself a pirate, and we can hardly expect him to be shocked at deeds in which all probability he took part. The buccanniers were mostly English, French or Dutch, and the most typical specimen of the pirate chief was undoubtedly Roche Brazilliano, who possessed to a remarkable degree all the peculiar and doubtful qualities that characterized the men who sailed under the black flag. Roche was a Dutchman by birth, and the surname Brazilliano was given to him by the pirates on account of his having lived many years in Brazil. He joined a pirate ship at Jamaica and served as an ordinary seaman on several expeditions, "and," says the chronicler, "he behaved himself so well as made him both beloved and respected by all."

BOARDING THE SPANARD, THEY QUICKLY OVERCAME THE CREW.

Love and respect, one would think, were not emotions common to the pirate breast; but, with a due allowance for the enthusiasm of the buccaneering scribe, we may conclude that, from the pirate's point of view, Roche was a satisfactory and able comrade.

One day discussion broke out among the pirates, and a discussion arose between a number of the crew and the pirate chief, doubtless regarding the share of plunder. The outcome was that the dissident seamen severed their connection with the ship. Roche Brazilliano was among them; and, indeed, it seems probable that he was the ringleader, for they made him their captain. A small vessel was procured, and Roche Brazilliano, but a little while before a penniless refugee, found himself captain of a ship manned by an daring crew as ever was afloat.

Luck favored the new pirate ship at the outset, for in a very few days it met a large merchantman homeward bound from New Spain. The pirates ran their ship alongside and, boarding the Spaniard, quickly overcame the crew and possessed themselves of the ship. Their hope of finding a rich cargo aboard was realized, for the quantity of plate which their search revealed was enough to make each man of them wealthy. In high spirits, they steered the big vessel to Jamaica, where they set to work in their usual fashion to fitter away their newly found wealth in as speedy and vile a manner as their depraved minds could suggest. Brazilliano swaggered and boasted in the streets of Jamaica and soon made himself a terror not only to the mariners of Spain, but to the inhabitants of Jamaica itself. His cruelty to any Spaniards that were unlucky enough to fall into his hands was invariably fiendish. On his cruises he would from time to time touch at small Spanish settlements to revictual his ship, plundering and wasting the land remorselessly, and he even refused to let him where their stores were hidden. But a bad day came for Brazilliano and his vessel. When cruising in search of a rich merchantman a terrific storm arose, and the pirate ship was driven aground and became a total wreck. All aboard (thirty in number) were lucky enough to reach the shore in a canoe, but they found themselves on a lonely part of an island, with nothing but their muskets and a little ammunition.

They decided to make their way along the coast to Golfo Triste, one of the places where the buccanniers were in the habit of refitting their ships, but as they were treading along, the paings of hunger and thirst already torturing them, a troop of Spanish horsemen appeared. The odds in favor of the Spaniards were more than three to one, but Brazilliano knew that he and his men could expect no mercy, and he quickly decided to fight to the last. "Fellow soldiers," he said, addressing the pirates, "we had better choose to die under arms, fighting as becometh men of courage, than to surrender unto the Spaniards, who, if they overtook us, will take away our lives with cruel tortments." His men were as determined as himself, and, forming up, they faced the Spaniards and opened fire upon them with their muskets. The buccanniers had always been noted for their marksmanship, and Brazilliano and his men emptied a sabbie at almost every shot. After an hour's hard fighting, in which the buccanniers' muskets did terrible execution, those Spaniards who remained alive and were not too sorely wounded to ride wheeled about and galloped off. The pirates walked over the field and knocked out the brains of the wounded, or, to use the philosophical buccaneer chronicler's own words, "such as were not already dead they helped to quit the miseries of life with the ends of their muskets." Only two of the pirates were killed in this battle, and the remainder mounted the horses of the dead Spaniards and continued their journey more quickly and comfortably.

They were within a short ride of Golfo Triste when they saw, anchored off the shore, a small man-of-war acting as guardship to some canoes that were loading timber. Brazilliano reconnoitered the ship and canoes and came back with a determination to capture them. The ship was strongly manned, and Brazilliano realized that pluck alone would not gain his end. In the morning when a part of the crew were ashore in the woods he and his men appropriated the canoes and, launching them, paddled up to the man-of-war and captured her with astonishing ease. A search for provisions was made at once, but the hungry pirates were disappointed in finding but little food in the ship. There was, however, a quantity of salt, so they killed their horses, cut up the meat, salted it and sailed off.

Their lucky star was in the ascendant again, for they fell in with and captured a merchantman laden with a mixed cargo and a treasure chest full of pieces of eight. With this rich booty they sailed off to Jamaica, once more to indulge in excesses. It was no uncommon thing for a pirate to spend 2,000 or 3,000 pieces of eight in one night and, awakening from a drunken stupor, find himself penniless.

It was after such a debauch that Brazilliano awoke one morning to face the fact that he must go to sea again at once to replenish his purse. He sailed for the coast near Campechy, which was always his favorite haunt, but for fifteen days he cruised in the neighborhood without any success, and at last he and his men lowered away the boats and rowed silently into the port to cut out a fine ship. But the tide of fortune was against them once more, and they were all captured, haled before the governor and dung into prison. It was the governor's intention to hang the lot of them, and Brazilliano exercised his wits to save himself and his men. By the aid of a friend in the town he caused a letter to be sent to the governor, purporting to come from a pirate cruising off the coast, warning him not to harm the prisoners, for if he did the writer swore to show no quarter to any Spaniard that ever fell into his hands. The governor was intimidated, and he released the prisoners on their taking an oath never again to commit an act of piracy. The pirates took the oath cheerfully and were provided by the nervous governor with a passage to Spain. It would be pleasant to be able to say that this was the end of the story of Roche Brazilliano, the pirate, but the chronicler declares that Roche and his men "soon returned to Jamaica and set forth to sea again, committing greater robberies and murders than before."

Marion, Ind., April 24.—Jerry Davis, a member of the Marion police department, who was suspended about a year ago, after charges of intoxication had been filed against him, has been united with his family through a letter written by his 5-year-old son. Davis left Marion and his wife and two sons to escape a police board trial. He failed to write home, but early last December the younger son, Jerry, Jr., aged 5 years, wrote a letter to the editor of the Commoner and Glassworker, a trade journal that his father had always taken. The letter was published, but the father failed to learn of it until recently. He immediately sent his wife sufficient money to care for her for some time and enough to pay the expenses of the two boys, Lawrence, aged 8, and Jerry, to Port Allegheny, Pa., where he is employed at his trade of a glassworker. Mrs. Davis and the two boys have gone to Port Allegheny.

Rain and Snow Stop Communication With the Coast.

Denver, Col., April 24.—According to reports received, a heavy storm of rain and snow has practically stopped telegraphic communication to the Pacific coast. The storm reaches from Arizona to Montana. In Colorado, after raining for twenty-four hours continuously, it began to snow, and in some sections a blizzard is raging. No reports of the storm's effect on railroad traffic had been received, but serious interference with the operation of trains, it is believed, must have resulted.

It was one of the greatest days known in the history of the western Pennsylvania river coal trade. Most of the coal was consigned to Cincinnati and Louisville.

Men Shoud Be Trained to Make Our Laws

By ANDREW D. WHITE, LL. D., Educator and Diplomat

IN earlier times and amid simpler problems PLAIN, STRONG MEN could lead us, and there will always be a great place and crying need for such, but just as in material progress THE OLD, STRONG ENGINEERS BY RULE OF THUMB CAN NO LONGER SAY THE LAST WORD, so in all this new political and social welter and swirl of conflicting and confusing ideas, issues, doctrines, tides, tendencies, we are now to need more and more men taught and trained to apply to our problems, national and international, the wisest thought and most skillful practice evolved in history or discovered among our contemporaries. MUCH HAS ALREADY BEEN DONE, BUT MORE REMAINS.

In view of this fact I would establish at as many of our greater universities as possible professorships, lectureships and fellowships and comparative law and legislation. Various countries have made a beginning in this already. Looking at the problem as it stands today, it would seem that nowhere would professors and students in this field be supplied with such abundant material for thought and work or encouraged by such certainty of fruitful results as in our own country.

AT PRESENT THE INSTRUCTION IN ALL OUR LAW SCHOOLS IS IN ANSWER TO THE QUESTION WHAT OUR LAW IS. THE INSTRUCTION I PROPOSE SHOULD ANSWER THE QUESTION WHAT OUR LAW OUGHT TO BE.

The first results of such professorships, lectureships and fellowships would naturally be to interest in all parts of the Union great numbers of YOUNG MEN, EARNEST, VIGOROUS AND IN THE BEST SENSE AMBITIOUS. The next probable result would be that many of these men would influence their fellow citizens helpfully on various important questions. Another exceedingly likely result would be the increasing entrance of such men into positions executive and legislative. Yet another would be A STEADY AND INTELLIGENT IMPROVEMENT IN THE LAWS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, and in addition to this there would come, in the legislation of our various states, an increasing tendency toward HOMOGENEITY, a consummation most devoutly to be wished.

Besides the improvement of law there is needed an improvement of institutions, and for this purpose I would establish in our more important universities professorships, lectureships and fellowships of COMPARATIVE ADMINISTRATION.

Look at the problem in its simplest form. Here are 80,000,000 and within the lifetime of many before me there will be 150,000,000 OF THE MOST ACTIVE MINDED AND ENERGETIC PEOPLE IN THE WORLD. The number of their combinations for every purpose seems infinite. There are not merely state, county, city and village organizations, but institutions dealing with pauperism, inebriety, lunacy, feebleness of mind, incipient crime, chronic crime, and besides these an innumerable number of minor corporations, combinations and arrangements bearing upon the public welfare. What some of them are our newspapers tell us from time to time TO OUR SHAME. Some other organizations are no doubt happy in their methods and admirable in their results, but the room for improvement still remains large.

The Menace of the Low Birth Rate In America

By Bishop WILLIAM C. DOANE of Albany

QUESTIONS like the tariff and the currency are of LITERALLY NO CONSEQUENCE whatsoever compared with the vital question of having the unit of our social life, the home, preserved. It is impossible to overstate the importance of the cause. If the average husband and wife fulfill their duties toward one another AND TOWARD THEIR CHILDREN as Christianity teaches them, then we may rest absolutely assured that the other problems WILL SOLVE THEMSELVES. But if we have solved every other problem in the wisest possible way it shall profit us nothing if we have lost our own national soul, and we will have lost it if we do not have the question of the relations of the family put upon the proper basis.

Among the most unpleasant and dangerous features of our American life are THE DIMINISHING BIRTH-RATE and the loosening of the marital tie among the old native American families.

IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING THAT FOR THE RACE AS INDIVIDUALS NO ARTISTIC OR SCIENTIFIC DEVELOPMENT WILL COUNT IF THE RACE COMMITS SUICIDE.

Broad Scope of the Discontent In Russia

By Mme. BRESHKOVSKY, Russian Agitator

NO one knows what has taken place in Russia in the last quarter of a century. Despite oppression, the people have been quietly educated about their rights until one fine day the American people are astonished to wake up and find that ALL CLASSES in Russia have risen in protest against their conditions. To those who have kept track of the movement, however, this is no revelation; THEY KNEW THAT THE PEOPLE WERE READY.

This movement is spreading to every city and village in Russia. We are on the eve of a revolution. The Russian people do not want to PERSECUTE any one. It is the Russian government which persecutes, and it is useless for the czar to refuse the requests of his people.

SUCH ACTION ON HIS PART SHOWS NEARSIGHTEDNESS, AND THIS IS A CRITICAL MOMENT, FOR NOW THE PEOPLE ARE MAKING THEMSELVES HEARD AT THE GATES OF THE WINTER PALACE.

Moscow Marriage Market.

A marriage market is held annually near Moscow, and it is said that over one thousand marriages are arranged there each year.

Pretty Thin.

There was a young lady from Lynn, Who was so exceedingly thin That when she essayed To drink lemonade She slipped down the straw and fell in. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Predecessor of Edison.
James Bowman Lindsay, who died June 29, 1862, foretold the application of electricity as an illuminant, a motive power to replace steam and substitute for coal in heating. He devised an electric telegraph, 1832, suggested welding by electricity, producing a continuous electric light, 1835; proposed a submarine telegraph, 1843; and accomplished wireless telegraphy through water, 1853.

To Banish Unwelcome Visitors.
House pests have great antipathy to various odors. To rid the house of mice, place a little oil of peppermint round their haunts. Potato ash formed by burning the parings to a cinder on the back of the stove, will effectually banish cockroaches if scattered about the place where they congregate.

Teacup for Fortune Telling.
In the fashionable west end of London a teacup especially made for fortune telling is being sold. The cup is engraved on the inside with the mystic symbols of the fortune-teller—a bell, heart, horseshoe, and so on. The tea leaves at the bottom are swirled round the cup, and according to the position of objects on which they stick so is one's fortune.

While seemingly a blessing, is often a menace. It is the spirit of every person to be neighborly and often we content ourselves with an inferior article to further good will.
